Eni confirmed in the sustainability FTSE4 Good Index

This important result confirms Enis consistent commitment for sustainable development and ensure the responsible management of its business, promoting social and environmental development of the communities in which Eni operates.
San Donato Milanese (Milan), 13 September 2013 - Eni has been confirmed in the FTSE4 Good Index, one of the world's most respected corporate social responsibility stock-market indexes.
Eni, member of the index since 2007, confirms with this recognition the company's excellence in environmental sustainability, human rights respect, transparency, relationship with stakeholders and local communities. It is on these parameters that an expressly established independent committee from FTSE Group, founder of the FTSE4Good, selects which companies to be included in the excellence index.
This important result confirms Enis consistent commitment for sustainable development and ensure the responsible management of its business, promoting social and environmental development of the communities in which Eni operates.
The FTSE Group is one of the leading companies in index creation and management, widely acknowledge by the international financial community and present in the main stock exchanges around the world.
