Career with an HHL Master. "I Am Building Germany's First Personalized Shopping Platform for Women"

Even while completing her Master Program in Management (M.Sc.) at HHL, Tanja Bogumil already had the vision of her own company firmly in her mind. The 28-year-old says: "After graduating in 2010, I got involved with the start-up scene via the Mister Spex online optician, founded by HHL alumnus Dirk Graber, where I worked in the areas of marketing and business development. I was able to familiarize myself with the structure and processes of an online business with strong growth potential within just a short period of time. In late 2011, I eventually founded my own company: a personal shopping platform for menswear. While undertaking this project, I developed the idea of expanding the concept to women as well - following the motto 'From women for women.' Based on a joint vision, my classmate from HHL, Linh Nguyen, and I founded Kisura in late 2012. We are connected by our love of fashion and the topic of entrepreneurship as well as a similar mindset which provides a stable foundation for cooperation, decision making and leadership."

The founder and CEO of Kisura GmbH, by its own account Germany's first personalized shopping platform for women, explains the business model of the young company: "Kisura combines all the advantages of online shopping with the exclusiveness of individual style counseling." Customers register online and then discuss the points they would like to be counseled on with the stylists. The Kisura stylists then put together entire outfits tailored to the customers' individual needs or recommend single pieces and accessories. Tanja Bogumil continues: "Honest, individual service is close to our heart. We want to inspire our customers and our services help to avoid bad buys."

The HHL graduate explains her work at Kisura: "I live and breathe business. At Kisura, I am responsible for the product and the areas of marketing and PR. This position is an exciting mix of strategic and operational activities. There is a lot to do and the diversity of my job is accompanied by a steep learning curve for many areas: product development, investor relations, video productions and media work are just a few of the tasks. Especially during the start-up phase, we have to make the impossible possible with limited resources. To achieve this goal, we show unforeseen creativity and improvisational talent every day."

Looking back at her time at HHL, Tanja Bogumil says: "I have learnt a lot during my Master studies at HHL - both on a professional and a personal level. Professionally speaking, I received a top-level education with just the right mix of theory and practice. I regularly face problems in everyday life for which there are no solutions just yet. The only thing that helps is often just thinking outside the box and jumping in at the deep end. Looking back, I feel that HHL has prepared me very well for this." The company founder considered the classes from the Entrepreneurship module as well as the Problem Solving and Communication class from the Strategy module the most important ones. Tanja Bogumil sums up: "HHL offers the best conditions for entrepreneurial independence. I find the excellent contact to the start-up scene and the exchange between HHL entrepreneurs to be very valuable. What counts for me beyond all of this though: at HHL I found friends for life."
